POETRY.

THE USE OF TEARS.

Be not thy tears too harshly chid. Repine not at the rising sigh;
Who, if they might, would always bid
The breast be still, the cheek be dry?

How little of ourselves we know Before a grief the heart has felt; The lessons that we learn of woe May brace the mind, as well as melt.

The energies too stern for mirth,
The reach of thought, the strength of will,
'Mid cloud and tempest have their birth,
Though blight and blast their course fulfil.

Love's perfect triumph never crown'd The hope unchequer'd by a pang, The gaudiest wreaths with thorns are bound; And Sappho wept before she sang.

Tears at each pure emotion flow;
They wait on pity's gentle chain,
On admiration's fervid glow, On piety's seraphic flame.

'Tis only when it mourns and fears, The loaded spirit feels forgiven; And through the mist of falling tears, We catch the clearest glimpse of heaven.

There is not a more elegant, finished, and agreeable writer in these United States of America, than he who indites for the New York Standard : here is a specimen :-

be a merry dog, while his bells peal forth the note that prelude the nuptials of the village maiden, the merriment which he alone is doomed not to share, although from his far CAPE ANN N. E. RUM. -25 hhds 60 bbls eminence he may see the whispering crowd pass joyously along. He who kisses a woman and jumps back as if he had achieved much, has only gratified his vanity. No man knows what a kiss is who has not prolonged it to its utmost extent. As Byron says :-

" A kiss's strength,

I think, should be computed by its length." A kiss you can remember for years, and muse over as you would over the flavor of the sunny south side, that once filled your exhausted cellar. As to a hurried kiss it is all nonsense, you might as well kiss a woman in Broadway; and in such a case what would be the odds whether it was your lady-love or your aunt. And so with all enjoyments in life, they must be prolonged to be pleasant. No man who knows what a good dinner is, will hurry through it. Who would relish the eager wit of a party of punsters, each trumping the others trick, after having heard the vit of a party of easy pleasant men?-Swallow hasty pudding as fast as you please, but in God's name, pause over a boudin a la Setton. Drink beer or brandy, but sip nectar and ambrosia."

ETENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.

No. XCIII. Washington, March 19, 1834.-After Mr Webster had closed his remarks yesterday on presenting his project for a Re-charter, Judge Leigh rose, and made altogether the best speech he has made this session; but he was dead against all National Bank projects, as unconstitutional! On this point Mr Webster had referred, as authority for the constitutionality of a national Bank, to the practice of forty years; the concurrence of almost all the States of the Union; and the decision of the Supreme Court. But these authorities did not convince Judge Leigh's judgment. Virginia was, is, and ever would be, opposed to a national Bank; and he would stand or tall with her. His speech will soon be before the public; and you can judge how gloomy the prospect is of getting any bill through the Senate, when the chief of the Nullifiers is against it; and had you been a looker-on here, as I have for more than three months. you would probably come to the conclusion. that the nullifying portion of the opposition, who can always trim the balance, will not suffer Mr Webster to have the credit of making any "compromise." Possibly, I may be wrong in my opinion; but if it should hereafter prove wrong, I feel very confident now, that this is their present determination. The Nullifiers owe him an old grudge for supporting the President's proclamation; and they will never consider it honorably paid, till Mr Webster either supports their cause, or has lost all hopes of his own political salvation.

There is another reason for believing that his bill will be dismissed, because it is the received opinion here, that Mr Clay and his partisans desired to continue their assaults upon the administration, under cover of his

Judge Leigh made an ingenius argument against the exercise of power, by reference to several historical events; he said that when KINGSBURY, Liverpoot wharf. Cromwell was invested with power, they did cromwell was invested with power, they did not expect it was to produce the overthrow of government; and when Great Britain taxed the Colonies, she did not dream of a separation.

This sort of argument, however, I consider by patterns of Jewelcy. Cash paid for old gold, or taken in exchange. no means conclusive: public opinion was ripe for a change in both cases; and if one cause had not produced it, another would. As to Cromwell, we might go farther back, and say if the King had not prevented him from emigrating to America, he would not have lost his throne; and yet other causes might have produced it. However, to allow them the benefit of this reasoning, we may add for the opposition, that but for their recalling the ice President, through envy, he would not have presided over their "collective wisdom!"

I saw enough to-day and yesterday, to satisfy my own mind that Mr Webster must look out for the nullifiers. Sampson was a man of great strength, and though he slew his ten thousand with the jaw-bone of an ass, he was yet the sport of the Philistines, and perished miserably. Mr Webster is a man of great mind, and though he may have slain a few po-THE BOSTON POST is published every morn- litical adversaries with his jaw bones, he may perish at last even by those he has affected to contemn-aye, the Philistines of nullification.

Judge Southard delivered an Eulogy, last evening, at the Capitol, on the character of William Wirt. It was an elegant and just tribute to his talents, and genius, and virtues. He carried his audience through the whole of the varied scenes of his life; in some par-ticulars, perhaps, too minutely; but he gave interest to all.

The Hall was very much crowded; but all paid the most marked attention to the Speaker. The eulogy will probably be soon in print; and, I trust, be soon in the hands of all who know how to estimate worth and genius, and who wish to have before them a life and character worthy of their imitation.

Mr Wild continued his speech to day in the House, but with all my partiality for his genius, I could not stay long to listen to his polished periods, and caustic illustrations. I deeply regret that he should be found among the Nullifiers; and among those more especially who think their aversion for the President, must be equal to their former regard.

Who would not weep, if such a man there be? And more than weep, if Atticus were he!

He made the very best speech in the House the last session; and I shall read his present one, even if it be the worst: but I shall read it rather in "sorrow than in anger."

In the Senate, Mr Talmadge continued his speech, commenced last week. I left him in possession of the floor at 4 o'clock; and presume it will take another day for him to conclude. You will find it a masterly production. Nothing escapes his notice; and he touches nothing he does not ornament.

Great inquiries are made for the proceedings of the great administration meeting in Boston. Itrust they will reach us before this reaches

TUESDAY, MARCH 25, 1834.

STENGGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS. No. XCIV.

Washington, March 20, 1834 .- We have been visited for three successive days with "most outrageous, extensive," and "distressing" delegations of dust! Is it the sacred ashes of our forefathers-O, my eyes ! - which, bursting their searments, have invested the capitol, and besieged the Executive mansion, to awe the deliberations of Congress, and remonstrate with the President, and protest against the removal of the deposites?

Can such things be, And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wender?

The "Cold-Water Society" must be called on incontinently for relief. We are not able even to open our eyes on our distressing condition; we cannot endure this state of things much longer-unless the deposites, removed from the ocean, are restored "right quick" to the earth. I don't stop to argue the case; I only give my opinion.

Mr Pinckney made a nullification speech in the House to-day; and his colleague, Mr Blair, answered him in just as many words as Cæsar reported his victory over Pharnaces-"'Tis a This is allowed to be the shortest speech ever delivered in Congress-and the most pointed. I did not hear it myself; it was reported to me. A valued friend of mine, a member of the House, promised last evening that he would despatch a courier to me in the Senate to-day, if Mr Blair should take the When he rose, my friend summoned his herald; but the speaker had concluded his speech, before the herald could possibly leave the hall.

Mr Wright made a short, but splendid and unanswerable argument, against Mr Webster's Bank project; and answered many insinuations and charges that had been made against the "Safety Fund System" in New York .-He replied to some observations made by Mr Leigh against the administration, for loaning the deposites to the State Banks without interest, and borrowing money for the Post Office Department, and paying interest. He reminded Mr Leigh, that the U.S. Bank had never paid any interest for the deposites, and that the Government had no right to loan their money on interest; that though there might be money in the treasury, not a dollar any other department, without an appropria-

Mr Wright is one of the most cautious, exact, clear, and conclusive debaters in the Sen-His courteous manner, and respectful language, cannot but secure him the esteem of even his antagonists. He never shows the slightest asperity; never utters a taunt, nor answers one; and never for a single instant loses his equanimity. He is the most remarkable speaker, in these respects, I ever heard. Yet with all this equanimity, there is an earnestness, and sincerity, and tone of candor in his voice, that fix the attention, and never sufsaying this of him, I do not detract from the merited praise I have bestowed on the other distinguished members of the administration There are scarcely any two alike, in their attributes or manner; and none that could well take the place of another. In one respect, Mr Wright resembles Judge Grundy -in his habitual candor and sincerity. But for keeping cool, the whole administration party are alike; and this is an advantage that the opposition, with all their boasted talents, are never likely to attain; they seem to draw the inspiration of all their arguments and oratory from Phlegethon; and one would suppose they suffered all the pangs of the damned, to witness the writhings of their elocution.

Even Mr Webster to-day confessed he was a patent for the discovery? I guess it was made a short time, at least, before his confession. "Warmth!" why, his eloquence is the hot springs of Hecla; but his patriotism, judging from the part he took with the country during the last war, the ice that surrounds He made a sarcastic and laughable reply to some of Mr Wright's arguments today, that reminded one of Nero's fiddling while Rome was burning. But it is his way; if he cannot answer his antagonist's arguments, he can ridicule them. The ridicule might have been very well in another place, and on another occasion-but was ill suited to the gravity of this subject, and the dignity of such a place. However, his lack of argument furnishes an apology; as he could not untie the Gordian knot of Mr Wright's argument, like Alexander, he cut it-with ridicule

Judge Leigh delivered his first speech again, for the fourth or fifth time, - his Kaleidascope speech. Though it has only a certain number of pieces of broken glass, of various colors, yet every turn presents some new comistration with every offence in the catalogue of constitutional violations; but acquitting it of any bad motive. It is quite laughable to hear him charge the President with one offence after another in the gravest manner, and concluding the chorus at every charge with-"God forbid that I should impute to him any bad motive.

Enough of this. Let us turn to Bostonto old Faneuil Hall-the Cradle of Liberty. Is it true, you rocked the cradle so hard at a late Democratic christening, that some of the 'distressed'' were rocked out, top side down? We have had a rumor here of such rude rock-The spirit of '76 must have attended the Cradle on that occasion; but could you not push the "distressed" bantlings without putting them to sleep so hard? They hisseddid they?-like the snakes around the cradle of Hercules? The serpents must mind how they coil around the "Cradle of Liberty!

I learnt last evening, but too late for the mail, that the brother of Judge Bouldin, a firm friend of the administration, was elected to fill his place. This is quite as good an index of public sentiment, in Virginia, as the instructions of their Legislature. While so much agony is felt by our beard- | money's worth. less patriots for the distress of the country, and the violations of the constitution, it may afford your readers-and I doubt not it will the President-some consolation to know that there are those, hoary in years, and exalted in virtues, whose lives outspan the history of the American Republic, who entertain different sentiments. I need ask no apology for concluding my letter with the sentiments of a venerable Dandalo of New England, traced who is but waiting impatiently on the verge of the grave to see this struggle over, that he might say, "Lord lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word; for mine eyes have beheld thy salvation." This aged divine and patriot has said of the venerable chief-

Yesterday morning, she was found drunk in a yard, and was placed in a hand-cart, and carried to jail, where she laid as motionless as a marble slab, for the space of six hours. BROWN'S SELF-INJECTING INDIA

RUBBER INSTRUMENT.

Py which removes costiveness and many of its consequent complaints, by the use of warm water only. The astrument is put up in a small pocket book, which may be carried in the vest pocket. It is so simple and portable an article, that its use is decidedly more pleasant than most of the instruments now in use; it has no piston or valve, or any of the complicated contrivance which causes the common instrument to get out of repair. It may be used by any person alone with the greatest ease, and it can be administered to patients lying in bed without turning them over or exposing them in the slighest degree. In this respect it has a decided advantage over all other instruments, as it does also in convenience, portability, and cheapness. Price $2.50. Please to observe the signature of the proprietor, William Brown, written with indelible ink on the inside of the India rubber cloth.

CERTIFICATES. RUBBER INSTRUMENT.

CERTIFICATES.

Having employed Mr William Brown's Self-Injecting India Rubber Apparatus, both in private practice and in the Massachusetts General Hospital, I can recommend it as well calculated to answer the purpose for which it is intended: while it is at least as effectual as the commen instruments now in use, it possesses the advantages of being in a more portable form, of a more simple construction, and consequently more easily kept in order, and of being afforded at a much less price.

GEORGE HAYWARD,

Jun. Surg. of the Mass. Gen. Hospital.

April 15th, 1833.

I concur in the opinion expressed above by Dr Hay

I concur in the opinion expressed above by Dr Hay JOHN WARE.

U. S. Marine Hospital, April 18th, 1833.

Mr Brown—The domestic instrument I received of you, I find upon a thorough trial to answer the expectations I had previously formed of it. Its simplicity of construction, its portableness, its being free from the hability to injury, and above all, the ease with which lavements may be administered by its means, have induced me to employ the instrument in this institution to the exclusion of all othersformerly in use.

Without the leastrisk of inconvenience.

The uniform success which has attended the use of it where it has been extensively used, in Boston and various other parts of the United States, and in the West Indies, attested by disinterested and highly respectable persons, affords, next to a trial of the medicine itself, the best commentary upon its virtues, and the bestrecommentation which can be offered to those who are unacquainted with it.

Extract of a latter received.

unacquainted with it.

Extract of a letter received from a gentleman in Boston, who had suffered severely from Indigestion for three years. 'During this time I suffered very much from mental depression, constant pain in the head and breast, and side, sharp shooting pains over almost the whole system—the food that I ate seemed to pass into my lungs and there remain, giving me great pain at tended with a strong degree of heat. At times I suffered so much from the pain of indigestion as to be confined to the bedfor two or three days. During one of these most severe attacks, I was induced by the advice of a friend to try your Vegetable Medicine. In the course of a few weeks I found myself much better, and by the time I had taken two bottles, considered myself wholly free from the complaint. I continue, on the least feeling of any thing like indigestion or pressure on the stomach, to take about a tablespoonful of it ure on the stomach, to take about a tablespoonful of it which, in the course of a few hours, completely restores me. It has had with mea very wonderful effect in strengthening the stomach and invigorating the whole system, and judging by my own case I consider it in all diseases connected with the digestive organs to be a very valuable medicine

It has been found singularly efficacious in cases of he most obstinate headache. It is put up in large bottles containing a pound and a half; and sold at seventy-free cents each, by Jonathan P. constant supply of their prepared Paint Oil, which they offer for sale with renewed assurance of its merit. This oil, independent of being 25 per cent. cheaper, will actually cover a quarter more surface than linseed oil, as has been repeatedly proved and confirmed by statements of many painters. Upwards of two hundred buildings in this city and vicinity can be referred to, painted within the ast two years and retained their gloss through the first, which is a clear demonstration of its strength. The prepared oil is found to answer a good purpose to mix with linseed oil, giving it strength and durability, with a more permanent gloss. It is found also to paint a very clear white; being light colored it does not give any coloring or yellow tinge to the lead in mixing. Oil Factory, head of Foster's wharf.
